al Work of Miller Administration is Continuation of Business Methods in Government—$3,300,000 Over Last Year.

Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 30.—Appropriations of $110,900,000, an increase $3,300,000 for the conduct of state vernment, are recommended for ensuing fiscal year in the budget pared by the board of estimate control for submission to the islature when it convenes next dnesday noon.

This is the first time in the history the state that a balanced budget been prepared. Governor Nathan Miller is chairman of the estimate control board, and the budget rks the final work of his administion.

In transmitting the budget, Gover- Miller said:

"The studies made by the board w that the inevitable annual inases in the cost of government may tinue to be offset in part, if not olly absorbed, by economies which y still be effected by the thorough velopment and extension of the siness methods already inaugurat, but not yet firmly established in public administration."

The board made no recommendans for any general salary changes new positions. The reason given s that no such changes should be owed until the employment or "job alysis study" now being made, is mpleted. When this work is finished board believes the salaries of all te employes should be standardized d proper salaries for all positions termined.

In the state hospitals and prisons wever, positions and salaries have en standardized, and under special ditions, which the board says ounts almost to an emergency, inases have been recommended and ovided for. The increases for hosal employes constitute one of the gest items in the increase of the spital budget over the appropriaons of last year.

While the increase in appropriaons over 1922 totals $3,300,000, inases by groups really amounts to ,460,000, the report shows. The crease for education alone is nearly 00,000 more than the net increase all departments, but decreases in er groups account for keeping the t increase to the first figure. Prinal increases are distributed among e state activities as follows:

Regulative $135,000; education ,726,000; agriculture $282,000; al $389,000; curative $1,330,000; aritable $354,000; constructive 44,000.

GAS POISONS MOTHER AND FOUR

Syracuse Man Mentally Unbalanced After Finding His Whole Family Dead From Monoxide Fumes.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 30.—A mother and her four children were found dead at their home, No. 250 Reed avenue, by her husband early this morning. Death was caused by gas poisoning. The dead:

Mrs. Katherine Riely Simone, 33.
Mary Elizabeth Simone, 11.
John Simone, 8.
William Simone, 4.
Robert Simone, 2.

Simone, completely unbalanced by his discovery, was taken to the psychopathic hospital.

First news of the tragedy was received at police headquarters at 2 o'clock by a telephone call from a woman in Reed avenue, who said she had been awakened by the raving of a man in a house on the opposite side of the street.

Following this came another call from Simone. "I found all my family lying on the floor," sobbed the man. "I guess they're all dead. For God's sake send help."

When police reached the house they found Simone, almost insane with grief, being held in the front room by a neighbor. Officers bursting into the kitchen found Mrs. Simone prostrate on the floor and near her the body of four-year-old William, partly dressed.

Adjoining the kitchen, in a bedroom, the bodies of the three other children were found stretched on the bed. Mary, the oldest of the children, was fully dressed and even had her hat on, when she was overcome.

A gas water heater and two jets of the gas range in the kitchen were still burning, and on the stove was a percolator of coffee and a plate of toast, indicating the family had been preparing a meal when they were overcome.

Coroner Crane, who arrived on the scene of the tragedy shortly after the police, said it was his opinion death had been caused by monoxide gas poisoning but would not state an opinion as to how long the family had been dead.

VATICAN NEARS CHANGE OF STATUS

Reconciliation With Italian State Near—Mussolini and Pope Discussing Terms.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rome, Dec. 30.—Negotiations for a reconciliation between the Italian state and the Vatican have reached the stage where actual terms have been proposed, it was learned in official circles today.

The conditions imposed by the Vatican were outlined as follows:

1—Papal sovereignty shall be recognized over the palaces in the Vatican gardens and at Villa Castel Gandolfo as well as other buildings which have been the property of the church for centuries.

2—Pope Pius XI shall renounce all other territorial claims, but will request an annuity of 3,200,000 lira which has been a standing offer from the Italian government since 1870.

3—The Vatican requests that the agreement, if ratified, shall be communicated to all foreign governments together with guarantees of independence of the church.

The movement for reconciliation between the Vatican and Quirinal has taken definite form since the creation of the Fascisti government headed by Premier Mussolini.

Pope Pius XI is favorable towards the proposals and at the time of his accession to the Papal throne last year, it was reported that one of the first official actions of the Papal government would be to make an offer to the Italian government.

PRESIDENT PARDONS EIGHT I. W. W. RADICALS, JAILED FOR LONG TERMS

All Must Leave Country and Stay Away—Were Identified With "Big Bill" Haywood Cases and Three Year Campaign Has Been Waged to Free Them.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Dec. 30.—Eight members of the I. W. W., convicted at Chicago for violation of the national espionage laws and now serving varying sentences in federal prisons, were extended executive clemency today by President Harding on the eve of the New Year. Those receiving clemency are the so-called "political prisoners" in whose behalf an unremitting campaign has been conducted for the last three years.

The men were pardoned outright by President Harding. All those released were identified with the "Big Bill" Haywood cases.

Those to be released and the sentences they are now serving, follow:

A. V. Azura, 20 years.
G. J. Bourg, 10 years.
Peter Green, 10 years.
Charles L. Lambert, 20 years.
Harry Lloyd, 5 years.
Burt Lorton, 10 years.
Sam Scarlett, 20 years.
Archie Sinclair, 10 years.

Attorney General Daugherty, announcing the pardons, said all of the prisoners are subject to deportation. The president commuted the sentences of each one to the term already served, upon condition that they be deported and never return to the United States, Mr. Daugherty said.

The president imposed the further condition that if any one of them does return, the commutation shall thereupon become null and void and of no effect. He would be apprehended and returned to prison to serve the remainder of his sentence.

Daugherty said the prisoners are to be allowed sixty days in which to arrange their personal affairs before their deportation. They will be required to give bond to the secretary of labor to surrender at a given time and place specified in the orders for deportation.

UNION PLANS MINE NATIONALIZATION

United Mine Workers, As Defensive Measure, Propose New Cabinet Office to Head Commission.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Dec. 30.—Nationalization of the hard and soft coal mines of the country, a proposal of the United Mine Workers of America, would follow lines determined in eight months' research work of the national committee according to a statement today of Christ J. Golden, president of District No. 9, who made the plan public.

The miners propose a federal interstate commission of mines, at the head of which will be a secretary of mines with a place in the cabinet. The administrative work would be handled by a national mining council.

The miners frankly admit the proposal is made as a defensive measure, to guard against a nationalization plan which would be "unfavorable to the workers."

Golden placed a valuation on the nation's soft coal mines of between $1,500,000,000 and $2,000,000,000 and the anthracite industry at $2,432,000,000.

BOOZE BOAT AGROUND; HOPEFUL CROWD ASHORE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Provincetown, Mass., Dec. 30.—Thirty residents maintained an all-night vigil over the schooner Annie L. Spindler, Yarmouth, N. S., to Nassau, which is hard aground off the Race Point coast guard station. The possibility that the schooner may break up and that her cargo of some 600 cases of whiskey may be scattered along the shore, explains the vigil. The vessel's crew was taken off during yesterday's storm by the coast guard station which employed a breeches buoy in the rescue work. The schooner's papers showed her to be bound from St. Pierre, Miquelon, to Nassau.

NEW YORK FACES DRY NEW YEAR

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Dec. 30.—The quietest, driest New Year's Eve in history was in prospect for New York city today. Ordinarily the old year is literally washed out in this city on a wave of alcohol and to the accompaniment of much noise. This year the police will cooperate with the federal authorities to prevent violations of the prohibition laws.

Police Commissioner Richard E. Enrighth has detailed hundreds of policemen to draw a "dead line" around the cabaret belt of the Great White Way to see that the dry laws are upheld.

There is deep gloom in hip pocket circles over the prospect.

COAL, AS EVER, SCARCE FOR POOR

New York's Unfortunate Pay Dearly For What They Do Get—Woodin Resigns As Courtesy—Coal For Those Who Can Buy.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Dec. 30.—The sun came out bright and cheerily today, but it shone from a cold, steel gray sky and brought little cheer to the great army of New York's poor suffering from chill and hunger. Nature did her bit in vain.

On top of the coal famine which followed in the wake of the winter's worst storm, State Fuel Administrator William H. Woodin resigned. But he intimated today that he would remain if given a free hand for action by the new state administration at Albany. There is sufficient coal on hand for those with money to buy it, but the decreasing stocks in the coal bins spell tragedy for the East Side poor.

There are many "cellar stores" on the East Side where coal of a kind, mostly unburnable slate, can be obtained at $1.20 per 100 pounds. But it can be had for seventy cents on the harbor front piers where public stores were opened for the poor. There all day long stand old women in ragged shawls, old men with patched coats and children with broken shoes, waiting in line with their seventy cents, mostly in pennies, dimes and nickels, clutched in their hands. They get their coal in sacks and hurry away through the snowy streets.

U. S. AWAITS PREMIERS' ACTION

If Paris Conference Fails This Government is Expected to Offer Plan of Adjustment Forestalling Ruhr Occupation.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Dec. 30.—The United States will make no definite move in the international situation until it can be seen whether the Allied premiers in their meeting at Paris next week can adjust the differences which have kept Europe in economic foment for three years.

If the premiers again fail to agree upon German reparations and other controversial problems, and if France persists in her announced intention of occupying the Ruhr Basin on January 15, then it is entirely probable the American government will intervene with a "plan" to adjust the differences, and designed particularly to forestall a French military thrust at the Ruhr.

This is the policy of President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes as gleaned today from the numerous official statements, semi-official statements and plain, ordinary conjectures, with which Washington has been deluged in the last 24 hours.

No hard and fast American program has been worked out, it was stated officially today.

JUMPS TO DEATH UNDER QUEER CONDITIONS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Detroit, Dec. 30.—James Cunliffe, 24, Richmond Hills, N. Y., a drug salesman, jumped to death from a window of a room on the sixth floor of the Hotel Tuller today. He came here to attend a meeting of employes of the Nyal Company, manufacturing pharmacists. Why Cunliffe committed suicide has not been ascertained by the police.

Shortly before he jumped, Cunliffe telephoned to police headquarters asking for help.

"I am being framed," he exclaimed.

Detectives responding to Cunliffe's call found him considerably excited and maintaining he was the victim of persons who wished to injure him.

With him were Joe Brigler and Douglas McElvin, a representative of Nyal Company.

"We'll quiet him down," Brigler and McElvin told the police. The detectives then left. A little more than one hour later word came to the police that a man hadjumped from a window at the Tuller. It was Cunliffe.

ANOTHER ENGLISHWOMAN SENTENCED TO HANG

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Dec. 30.—Mrs. Edith Thompson, a beautiful matron of Ilford, and her youthful lover, Frederick Bywaters, who, on December 11, were found guilty of the murder of the woman's husband, must answer for their crime upon the gallows according to the Daily Mail today.

Despite the mighty wave of protest against execution of a woman, which has swept all Britain the past fortnight, Home Secretary W. C. Bridgeman has decided to advise King George against granting a reprieve, the Daily Mail stated.

Mrs. Thompson was one of three women who were sentenced to death within 24 hours by the same judge. Her case aroused the most interest, however, because of the melodramatic elements it contained. The trial revealed that Mrs. Thompson fell in love with Bywaters; she plotted the death of her husband, poison failed; Bywaters consented to act as agent; a flash of steel in a dark street and Thompson fell with a dagger thrust through the heart.

LINERS BATTLE SEAS; COUE AT ALL MEALS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Dec. 30.—Radio reports received today were that the trans-Atlantic liners Majestic and Berengaria, largest and fleetest of modern passenger carriers, were still battling with huge seas, the greatest experienced in years, but that no harm had been done save that many of the passengers had suffered intensely from seasickness.

The ships are expected a day or two late at their New York docks as both have been compelled to run at reduced speed.

It is reported the ships have encountered waves 75 feet high, that broke over their top decks.

Dr. Emile Coue, famous French auto-suggestionist, is aboard the Majestic and has not missed a meal and many passengers have taken up his suggestion "Every day, in every way, I am getting better and better," as an offset to the pangs of mal de mer.

Boston Cold to Cupid.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Boston, Dec. 30.—Daniel J. Cupid is losing his grip. If you don't believe it, ask any one in the marriage license bureau. During the past year fewer than 9,000 couples ventured to try out the theory that two can live as economically as one. Back in 1917 the bureau issued 12,000 licenses. The high cost of living and the housing shortage are given as reasons. Births have decreased appreciably, figures show.

WINTER TREES

"We would like to have you know," the Winter Trees were whispering, "that we are not wasting our time now. We are thinking of the springtime and getting ready for it and nourishing and strengthening ourselves."

"You can tell that our twigs will be opposite each other, because our buds are," said the Horse-Chestnut tree.

"You can tell the same of us," said the Dogwoods.

"And of us," said the Maples.

But most of the other trees whispered in the winter breeze:

"You can tell that we're different. Our buds are never opposite each other, and so our twigs aren't."

"I have gray, rough twigs," said the Slippery Elm, "but I'm nice to chew.

"It's more than can be said of most trees. Yes, I'm a delicious kind of thing to chew!"

"You talk about yourself in a rather strange manner," said the Cork Elm, with a cork-like material upon its branches.

"I hope I will be recognized," said the Black-berried Holly. "I am green, as far as my leaves are concerned, most of the winter.

"You Help Me, Too."

"I'm a relative of Christmas Holly. But my berries are black, as you may have guessed from my name. And I am also called Inkberry!"

"I am a Red Spruce tree," said the Red Spruce tree, "and I will grow nicely if horrible forest fires don't come up against me and fight me. I can't fight them back.

"I have nice cousins known as the White Spruce. They're a fine family and dress handsomely with bluish foliage, which is very lovely.

"Then I have cousins known as the Black Spruce family. They have bluish foliage and they are more unusual than I am.

"But still I do not think it matters if one is a more usual kind of tree. Any kind of a tree is nice, I think. Of course I look upon it as a tree would!"

"The strangest thing about the trees to me," said Mr. Wind, as he blew through the trees with Old Man Winter nearby, "is the way they like to travel."

"Travel?" asked Old Man Winter.

"Yes," said Mr. Wind, "and I help them, too."

"Of course I suppose you do if you say you do.

"In fact, I know you do if you say you do, for though you're a blustering old fellow, you're truthful," said Old Man Winter.

"Yes, it's true," said Mr. Wind, "but you help me, too. Yes, Old Man Winter helps.

"Do explain," said Old Man Winter.

"Well," began Mr. Wind, "I help blow the seeds of the trees so they will fall away from the big tree and so they will see a little more of the world.

"The pine tree seeds have small wings attached to them, you will notice, and so I can help them easily. They almost help themselves.

"Plants and trees like to travel, you see, and have a change, just as people and animals do."

"I see," said Old Man Winter, "but I never thought of it before.

"Strange, here I've been helping, too, without knowing it, and I never thought about the traveling of the tree seeds!

"Well, Old Man Winter had better come around next year. He will doubtless learn something else then," Old Man Winter chuckled.

"For as old as he is he still has a great deal to learn."

"So have I," said Mr. Wind, "but don't let's say so above a whisper."

And Mr. Wind whistled merrily.

An Oath in Japan.

Girl scouts take a promise of loyalty to God. The Japanese do not worship any one God, so a knotty problem arose when scouting was introduced in Japan. At the International council held in England recently, it was decided to permit the Japanese to join the movement provided they live up to the ten scout laws and are loyal to the spiritual part of the promise. They may swear by the Eternal Truth of Their Ancestors or whatever represents their ideal.

WHAT TO EAT

There is no more attractive dish, nor one more universally liked than a well-made salad. The following is good enough for any guest:

Apple and Pineapple Salad.—Drain a can of choice tender pineapple. Boil the juice with the strained juice of a lemon, sweeten to taste. Cut the pineapple into small uniform pieces, add four sweet apples diced, sprinkle with sugar to make the mixture quite sweet, or add a cupful of finely diced marshmallows, omitting the sugar, then pour the boiled, cooled juices over the fruit and set aside. Just before serving add one cupful of finely-minced almonds which have been blanched and one pint of sweet cream whipped. Serve at once.

Welsh Rabbit.—Cut one-half pound of cheese into bits, put it into a saucepan with four tablespoonfuls of butter, and place it over slow heat to melt. In another saucepan scald a pint of milk, add a beaten egg to which has been added two tablespoonfuls of flour and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Let this mixture cook, stirring until smooth, then pour the milk into the cheese and beat vigorously with an egg beater, then add cayenne pepper to taste. Serve on hot buttered toast or on large crackers which have been slightly browned in the oven.

Codfish Chowder.—Nothing better for a cold weather dish than this: Cut a half-pound of salt pork or less into dice, fry brown, add three sliced onions, cook until yellow, then add a quart of boiling water and four sliced potatoes. Cook until the vegetables are tender. Meanwhile soak a pound of codfish—less will do. Shred, add with a quart of milk to the vegetables and when boiling hot drop in half a dozen soda crackers. Season well with salt and pepper and serve piping hot. In most families there is never any leftovers from this dish.

Onions French Fried.—Peel onions cut in one-fourth inch slices, separate into rings. Dip into milk, drain, dip into flour and fry in deep fat. Sprinkle with salt and serve as a garnish to a platter of meat.

Demand Made by World.

The orator's words come forth with power only when he puts himself into them. The artist lifts men to the highest apprehension of beauty when soul-power and mind-power, when heart and conscience, all, are put into the painting, the music, or whatever that one is producing.

Far above anything and everything which man's outward life yields is man's inner life, his deeper self, his true self. The world wants, needs, asks not for yours, but for you.—Grit.

TALKING ECONOMY.

One of our new statesmen recently made his first announcement by declaring for economy of government and reduced taxation and in the same breath demanding enlarged appropriations for public projects. Economy and enlarged appropriations! Apparently he saw no contradiction in the two programs. What is to prevent your having both the penny and the cake? Who can not keep a tight grip on his purse strings and spend lavishly at the same time? It is "just as easy," particularly for a government with taxing power. Why can't the government be economical on the one hand and keep open the flood gates of expenditure on the other? Isn't the money bound to come from somewhere? It is this preposterous attitude of so many politicians that largely explains why a vast increase in the government's expenses continually goes on and taxes inevitably become more and more burdensome.

The politicians talk economy yet work for increased expenditure, particularly in the interests of their constituents and supposedly popular "public projects." And the army of reform lobbyists back them or lead them in this business. This or that or the other would be a good thing for the public and the Federal government must by all means undertake it (expecting the public to pay the bill in taxes.) States need this or that which reformers urge, but can't afford it, and the Federal government must provide the means—largely getting control while doing so, thus both dulling the state's sense of its own responsibility and encroaching upon its reserved powers. Already this is an old story, with the result that the Federal government is all-encroaching, we have billion dollar Congresses, and the end of increasing taxation is away out of sight. Will a halt ever be called? Certainly not by statemen who talk economy and demand increased appropriations in the same breath.

"MOONSHINE" PROSPERITY.

The Springfield, Mass., Republican declares that domestic distilling "is known to be extremely prevalent" and accepts as altogether credible the statement of a local social worker that in a section with which she is familiar there is no poverty now, whereas a year ago children could not go to school because of the need of shoes and clothing and food was lacking in many homes, the marked difference in prosperity being due to the increase in domestic manufacture and sale of "moonshine." And this, according to the newspaper quoted, "is merely a detail of a consistent picture, the rest of which may be filled out from common knowledge." Obviously such prosperity in the homes of the poor at the price of law-breaking is, from every point of view, a portentous development.

It seems that the home brewing of wine, which was widespread and immediate because the process is relatively simple, is now second to the more difficult process of distilling hard liquor, the latter being both more remunerative and more readily distributed by bootleggers owing to less bulk. Figures are given showing that samples of seized liquors submitted to the Massachusetts department of public health for court use increased from 1429 in 1920 to 5900 estimated for 1922, and that of these samples the percentage of distilled liquors had risen from three per cent in 1920 to 76 per cent in 1922. In view of the great prevalence of domestic distilling, the Republican is of the opinion that the importance of the issue raised in the Federal court in Springfield over the right of the Federal officials to search suspected homes can hardly be exaggerated.

Discussing the "illusion" that "nobody wants to read anything more about the war," the New York Times mentions a number of popular war stories now on the market to prove the contrary and says there never was any weariness "of real war books" showing that the war "had an object of supreme consequence."

As a general rule the most popular man in a community is the good loser. The fact that some men have lost and have taken it gracefully is what won for them, more than anything else, on future occasions. The poor loser should not play in any game. He suffers terribly himself and he makes others suffer also when he doesn't win, never stopping to think that in every contest somebody must lose the same as somebody must win. Some men will leave Albany the first of the year just as happy as they came to Albany two years ago. They will be the good losers.

3. Does the English sparrow live anywhere but in America?

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. Last fall while picking blueberries, a boy caught a young rabbit. In its ear was found something resembling a blueberry, which being removed, it walked. Two more were found in the rabbit's ears, and were removed with difficulty by tweezers. What were they?

We can only guess that it was a tick of some kind, the fact of its clinging so persistently rather bearing out this guess. Ticks are arachnids, as are spiders, and there are many kinds infesting cattle. There are certain parasites that might be found clinging, but they do not walk.

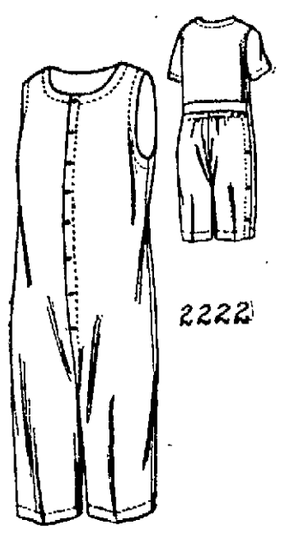

2. I notice birds flying very high on their northern flight every spring. They are nearly white, and make a nickering noise. Please tell name. People about here call them "nickering mares."

Correspondent omitted any mention of size. They might be killdeer plover, which look white from underneath, and make a noise that might be described as "nickering." Or might be any member of the sandpiper tribe.

3. What is the green substance on stones in springs and brooks, commonly—but probably erroneously—called "frog spittle."

The rather messy-looking green frothy masses on the water have nothing to do with frogs, but are a low form of plant life, any one of various filmamentous fresh-water algae. A very common floating species is Spirogyra.

HOW

PRIMITIVE RACE MAKES USE OF "FIRE STICKS."

—Far in the interior of New Guinea—behind the rolling surf, beyond the mountains—lives a race of pygmies. They are chocolate-colored men, barely four feet seven inches in height, but they are well proportioned, and bear no signs of deformity or dwarfism. "Tapiro" is the name of the tribe to which they belong.

This tribe has its own villages and its own plantations. Their dress is a grass helmet with upright rims and a projection at the crown in which a bird of paradise plume is usually worn. This hat, with a bright, yellow gourd suspended by a string about the waist, is their sole costume, writes Temple Manning in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

But over the shoulders of each man is hung a bag made of string. It holds fishing tackle and fire sticks. Thus the men are always provided with food-catching utensils and the vital sparks with which to start a fire to cook what they catch.

The fire-making implements are two in number. One is a stick of hardwood, the other a "rope" of rattan. A cleft is made in the stick, and a stone is forced into the cleft to keep the sides apart. The firemaker places one end of the stick beneath his foot and the other end of the stick over a bunch of dried leaves. Then he places the rattan rope beneath the cleft stick and grasps it with both hands.

Working the rope back and forth as rapidly as his hands can move, the friction of the rattan against the sharp edge of the wood causes ignition. The leaves begin to smolder, and he blows them into a flame.

It isn't a speedy process, but it is sure. For generations beyond memory these pygmies of the forest-covered hills have depended upon their fire sticks for cooked food and for heat.

REPAIRING RAVAGES OF WAR

How Co-Operative Societies Are Aiding the Good Work in Devastated French Regions.

During the last year the co-operative movement in the devastated regions of France has made considerable progress; in fact, at the present time the greater part of reconstruction work is executed by such societies. Both the government and the population of the devastated localities have found these methods of the greatest practical value. Furthermore, the government encourages their organization and development.

Since the beginning of 1919, 203 co-operative societies have been organized in the department of the Meurthe-et-Moselle. They have already obtained important results. On December 31, 1920, urgent repairs had been made on approximately 12,000 buildings. The sums disbursed for these repairs amounted to 124,430,000 francs ($24,014,090 par), or 81 per cent of the total sum paid out for this purpose in the department. In 1920 the co-operative societies commenced the erection of 621 farm buildings, or 88 per cent of the total in the department. The sum disbursed for the above purposes amounted to 20,250,000 francs ($3,908,250 par), or 95 per cent of the total.

How Human Heads Differ.

Women have broader heads in comparison with their length, darker eyes and hair, and a less marked bony development of the skull, according to Miss Fleming of Aberystwith, who, according to the Daily Chronicle, gave the British association some facts and figures associated with her investigation of sex and growth features, and conclusions based upon an examination of 2,500 children and 1,000 women, mostly Welsh.

She had compared these with the figures of Professor Fleure relating to man. There was a marked tendency both in boys and girls to an inch more in width than in length of head. Re-examination showed that the vivid red hair of children changed into brown about the twelfth year. In the case of fair-haired children the darkening process began earlier in the case of girls than in boys.

How to Find Faults in Machinery.

If your automobile engine is not running as it should, and you do not know what the trouble is, get one of the new binaural stethoscopes and make a diagnosis, as a physician does when he wants to learn what the trouble is with the interior machinery of his patient. This improved device for detecting faults in running machinery has the advantage of possessing two ear-pieces which entirely exclude external noises. It has a jointed rod which is placed upon the part where the noise is suspected to be, and the noise is so magnified that the location and nature of the trouble can be quickly determined.

Why He Is Unpopular.

Mrs. Bunker—He sure is unpopular with the golfers since he worked so hard on his invention.

Mr. Bunker—What's the invention?

Mrs. Bunker—A golf ball that registers the strokes during the course of the game, and there is no chance to lower the score.

Wednesday evening at the chapel of the First Reformed Dutch Church There was a very interesting service by the Sunday school. The picture of Bethlehem, 9x27 feet, which transformed the front of the room into a panoramic view of Bethlehem and the plains of the shepherds, showing trees, buildings, etc, in rich natural colors, colored especially for evening display, at the left of the picture an angel appearing to the group of shepherds and at the right the magi with their camels, all life size—by an adjustment of lights which were used during the service of the white gifts for the king, made a very pleasing and instructive service. On the platform there was a manger and a pretty setting of ferns and greens. There were two large Christmas trees, one on either side of the platform.

The service was opened by the school singing "Joy to the World," the singing by three choirs at different intervals of the service who were located in different parts of the church, but were not in view, was very effective. At the latter part of the service, the scholars marched around the school and each member gave to the wise men a white gift for the king. These gifts were sent to the Industrial Home. At the conclusion of this service, Santa presented a gift to each member of the school.

NOTICE OF ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the C. Hiltebrant Dry Dock Co. will be held at the office of the Company, South Rondout, in the town of Rondout, County of Ulster and State of New York, on the eighth day of January, 1923, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, for the election of directors and inspectors of election, and the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

Dated, South Rondout, N. Y., December 23rd, 1922.

FRED J. WALL, Secretary.

S. OF V., NOT LEGION, TO SUCCEED G. A. R.

Say Officers of Tappen Camp, Who Express Surprise That Anyone Should Question Their Succession.

Kingston, N. Y., Dec. 26, 1922.

To the Editor of The Freeman.

Sir:—

Having read in a recent issue of The Freeman the report of Adjutant Eugene B. Carey of Kingston Post, American Legion, Tappen Camp No. 1, Sons of Veterans, were surprised to learn that the American Legion of this city had decided to be the successors of the G. A. R. and would take over their work and ask for the entire appropriation for Memorial Day observance, after the G. A. R. had ceased to exist, which, we hope will be many years yet.

The members of Tappen Camp, No. 1, Sons of Veterans, and the order at large highly honor and respect the American Legion and the veterans of the World War, for their services to our country, but the American Legion is not connected with the G. A. R. in any way and their officers must know or should know that the G. A. R. has in their national and department encampments designated the order of the Sons of Veterans, U. S. A., as their successors and heirs, and expect them to carry on their work when they are gone, and these encampments have for the past four years turned a deaf ear to the representatives of the American Legion who have appeared before them, and tried to supplant the Sons of Veterans.

In many places throughout the country, the observance of Memorial Day has already been mostly left to the S. of V., notably New York city, and in Kingston Tappen Camp and their Ladies' Auxiliary have assisted Pratt Post for the past 39 years, and the Auxiliary have for the past seven years had special services at Kingston Point for the soldiers and sailors and marines who lost their lives on the waters.

And why should we not? Were not the veterans of the Civil War our fathers? And it is our right and duty to keep green the memories of their services and sacrifices. Our worthy brother Warren G. Harding, president, who is one of our most active members, has recently written the following:

"I feel increasingly the importance of the Sons of Veterans as an instrumentality for perpetuating the high ideals of patriotic and public service which we have inherited from our fathers of the Civil War epoch More and more the duty descends upon the Sons to carry forward the splendid work of their fathers."

Thanking you for the space in your valuable paper we are,

Respectfully,
WILLIAM P. FRANCE,
Commander.

Past Councilor and Secy.

Delightful Assembly Dance.

The Holidays Assembly Dance of 1922 will go on record as being one of the most delightful affairs of its kind ever held in Kingston. There were a great many young people in attendance, some our own boys and girls from college, others guests from out of town. Then to add to the pleasure of the evening, at the close of the Rutgers College Glee Club concert at the High School, several of the Glee Club men attended the dance. The array of handsome, artistic and exceedingly becoming new gowns was most attractive. During the evening Mrs. Daley served delicious sandwiches, cake and coffee, punch and coffee being served between the dances throughout the entire evening. It was the enthusiastic opinion of all that it was an Assembly Dance long to be remembered because it was so delightful. The committee for the assemblies this year is composed of Mrs. James O. Contribute to Xmas Dinner.

In the list of names of those contributing candy, fruit jellies and cake to the Tuberculosis Hospital and the City Home, for their Christmas dinner, should have appeared the names of Mrs. Martha Schwab and Master Herbert Schwab.

The Value of Shadows.

Reflections and shadows form an important aid to decoration. The shadow of a spray of roses or a group of tall grasses against a light wall or table is very beautiful. So is the reflection of a well-planned group of furniture or pottery in a mirror. A gray silhouette of a vine is sometimes painted on the window shade of a sun room to give the effect of a shadow.

Put Prohibition on Cotton.

In 1700 the importation of cotton goods into Great Britain was prohibited and in 1721 the manufacture of cotton in England was absolutely forbidden by act of parliament, a penalty of $100 being inflicted for selling it and one of $25 upon any person convicted of wearing it.

WHY

Were Great Cities of Central America Depopulated?

These Indians (the Mayas of the Yucatan and adjacent territory) tamed the wet tropics and developed one of the great civilizations of the world, Herbert J. Spinden writes in the World's Work. In the area of the first empire of the Mayas there were greater cities than any in Central America today—there were millions of people in regions where now there are only thousands. This area was one of the most densely populated parts of the world between 200 and 600 A. D. Then a calamity came and swept these cities clean. Was it yellow fever?

Imagine a people whose lives depended on water kept in cisterns and on agriculture developed to meet the demands of a tremendously centralized population. An invisible death like yellow fever would strike them with uncontrollable panic. We have only to read the annals of fear when our own southern states felt the dreadful visitations—the fleeing multitudes, the paralyzed commerce, death from hunger and exposure, picket lines where men shot to kill.

The world was recently startled by a story of disordered migrations in hunger-stricken Russia. In 600 A. D. the Maya empire may have witnessed this thing in still more intense form.

SUN'S EFFECT ON MAN'S WORK

How Toilers Capacity Increases as the Days Grow Longer—Less Production in Winter.

It has been found that there is a distinct relation between one's capacity for work and the intensity of the light in which that work is performed, says a writer in the London Answers.

After the sun turns northward, for instance, at the close of the year, the gradual increase of the natural light leads to a rise in the average man's working powers. This rise continues throughout the spring, and is arrested only when the summer heat begins to have its effect.

During the hot months the favorable influence of the light is a good deal counteracted by the enervating temperature; but when, in the late summer and early autumn, the temperature has fallen, the capacity for work again increases.

Then, when the dark days return, the effect is seen in the diminished output of the worker. This apparently becomes more noticeable if the weather is unusually cold with the darkness.

A dark, cold winter, therefore, is much more likely to affect one's working capacity adversely than a dark, warm one. There is an additional advantage with the latter, it seems to the writer, namely, that a dark, warm winter would mean a lower air pressure than if the winter were cold. This lower air pressure would most probably be good for the health of both the manual and brain worker.

A warm winter would no doubt be a fairly dark one, as it would mean winds from a southerly quarter. Such winds, coming from the warm ocean, would be cloud-laden, and the result would be darker days. This would apply especially to large cities and towns, whose air in the winter time is so full of smoke and other light-screening impurities.

Why Bridal Orange Blossoms.

Various theories have been given regarding the use of orange blossoms as bridal ornaments. The custom is supposed to have been brought to Europe by the crusaders from the East, the Saracen brides being accustomed to wear orange wreaths at their marriage. To this objection was raised that, although the orange tree was brought to England as early as 1290, it was long before there was any real cultivation of it even in greenhouses. A second theory is that orange blossoms came to be worn by brides on their marriage because they were not only scented, but also were rare and costly and so within the reach of only the noble and rich that indicating the bride to be of High rank. A third is that orange bridal wreaths had their origin in Spain, where oranges have been cultivated for centuries. Thence the fashion passed to France, and by means of French millinery was spread to other lands.

How Food for Navy Is Protected.

Commissary supplies for the United States navy are inspected by the United States Department of Agriculture, which is strictly observing that our sailor boys obtain good food. During the last year its inspectors stationed at the various navy yards, bases of supplies and naval hospitals examined a total of 29,880,376 pounds of fruits and vegetables for the navy. Of the amounts inspected, 2,032,359 pounds were rejected, cuts amounting to 114,982 pounds were made, and 35,014 pounds were found to be of short weight. In addition to this work, 1,332,472 pounds of fruits and vegetables were inspected for the marine corps in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and San Diego.

Indian Lodge Tales

THE WORLD OF SUN AND BLUE SKY

NOW when the Navajos climbed from the world of darkness into the world of moon and stars they were very happy, and for many years they flourished and prospered under the guidance and leadership of their great chief, Chis-Chil-E-Go.

All the warriors and the elders of the tribe, who had lived in darkness for many years, rejoiced at the new twilight they had found, and were content to rest in this world in peace and happiness. They planted their crops and fished in the streams and hunted in the mountains and valleys, and reared their families in the light of the moon and the stars.

But is so happened that years passed, and the elders of the tribe died, and the younger men became leaders—and they were discontented and unhappy, and they began to seek about for new worlds and new streams and new forests.

There was in this world of twilight a great lake, and in the center of the lake was a great lily that grew and grew until no man could see the top and only the whiteness of the moonlight on its enormous petals was reflected for the tribesmen to see. The Navajos watched the lily, and saw it grow, and they were curious, but none among them was brave enough to swim the lake or climb the lily stalk.

But finally there came a young man as chief, the great grandson of Chis-Chil-E-Go, and he was very brave and very venturesome. Seeing the sadness and discontent of his people in the land of twilight and shadow, his heart was sore oppressed and he determined to find a new world where happiness would come to everyone. So for days he prayed to the Great Father for advice, and in his prayers came the vision of a new world where there was great light and warmth, and where there were days and nights—a land of green fields and wooded hills.

So, bidding his people wait for him, he jumped into the lake and swam to the great lily stem, and this he entered and the door closed behind him. And inside the lily stalk he found a great hall leading upward and upward, and this he climbed. For days and days he continued to climb, until he was nearly exhausted for he had brought no food and no drink and the climb was long and tiresome.

But finally one day he looked up and saw light, and so he pushed on upward and upward, until he stepped out from the lily stalk into a lily blossom.

The lily blossom lay in the middle of a great lake, and the lake was situated in a new world—a world of sunshine and green trees. There it was that the Navajo chieftain first saw the sun, and when he saw the great father of fire he was frightened and amazed, and he fell on his face and worshiped it, and gave thanks for the new world which he had found.

When he arose and swam to the shore he found a world of happiness and content; warmed by the rays of the father sun, where birds sang, and animals played in the fields, and flowers bloomed and everything was gay.

Then like his great grandfather he remembered his own people, and taking food from the trees and the streams he went back through the lily stalk to the land of twilight, and there he called the tribesmen about him and told of the discovery he had made. Many of the people believed him, but some did not, and there was much discussion. But finally the tribe decided to divide, and those who were brave and strong started for the new world, but those who were weak or old, or afraid, remained behind in the world of twilight.

So the young chief and his party started out, and they climbed the lily stalk and came into the world of sunshine and warmth, and like their chief they fell on their faces and thanked the Father Sun for the new world which he had given them.

So it was that the Navajos came into the world of sunshine which they know today—and when they had come here then they planted their crops and built their homes, and tended their herds even as they do unto this day.

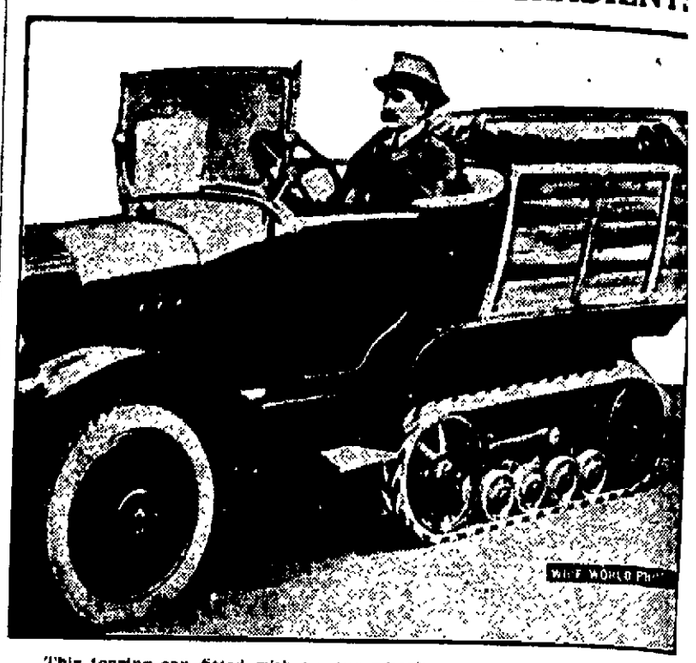

But those who were weak and afraid, and who had remained behind were lost forever—for when the tribe had ascended to the new world then the great lily dried up and disappeared, and where it had grown there was only a mammoth mountain, shutting off forever the road to the land of twilight. To this day the ones who remained behind have never been seen more.

Today the Navajo mothers, when their children are frightened or bad, tell them the story of the land of twilight—and the cries are hushed and the naughtiness forgotten under the threat that they will be sent back to live forever in a land of semi-darkness with the lost tribe that is no more.

TOURING CAR ABLE TO TRAVERSE FIELDS OF SNOW AND GRADIENTS

This touring car, fitted with tractor wheels, is able to traverse fields of snow and steep, sandy gradients, as well as smooth pavements. It attracted great attention at the annual automobile show, held at the Grand Palais, Paris. It is an ideal outfit for the tourist, who detests public vehicles.

VALUABLE HINTS ON CAR REPAIRS

Owner of New Automobile Is Advised to Keep It Out of Hands of Mechanic.

AVOID GRINDING OF VALVES

More Engineering Skill Is Employed in Putting Machine Together Than Is Believed—Some Overhauling Necessary.

New cars ought to be kept out of the repair shops as long as possible, provided, of course, that a vital part does not manifest the sort of trouble which could be remedied or prevented from doing further damage by a little adjusting. It is a fact that such jobs as grinding valves, relining brakes or tightening engine bearings are better to be left undone unless there is urgent need for them.

An experienced car owner was recently having the valves of his new car ground in for the first time in 10,000 miles, but he told the mechanic that he regretted having to touch the car because it would never run the same again. The mechanic admitted that many an engine ran very much worse after being cleaned and added that it only went to show that you can't make an old thing new.

We are often told how the popular-priced cars are seemingly "thrown together" when being rushed through the factory, and we reason that a painstaking mechanic ought to be able to improve a new car by re-assembling it. Acting on this assumption, says Fred C. Russell, one car owner commissioned several experienced repairers to rebuild the motor of his new car. They did. But the car has never performed as well as it did before.

The failure of experienced mechanics to duplicate factory workmanship proves that in the rush to turn out cars at the rate of hundreds per day more engineering skill is employed than would appear at first glace. Valve tappets, for instance, are very rarely brought back to adjustments as accurately as when the car is new. After an engine's valves have been ground in and the car run about a hundred miles with tappets loose so as to give the valves opportunity to properly set themselves I have seen mechanics work for hours—even days—trying to obtain adjustments which would not be so tight as to hold a valve open after its stem has expanded nor so loose as to cause clicking or tapping; yet these quantity production cars will invariably come through from the factory with adjustments which are ideal. If any car owner has an engine which is moderately quiet and running in fairly good shape, it is advisable to leave well enough alone.

Certain reasonable repairs are always necessary, but one must draw the line somewhere. This line, however, is not so obvious to many motorists. Such car owners would benefit by comparing the performance of cars before and after going through the overhauling process. It will be discovered that most of the cars which are brought in for grinding of valves go out making much more noise than when coming in, while those machines which had old gears or roller bearings replaced will hum like unoiled street cars. A number of older cars will be vastly improved; mainly because they ran so very poorly when brought in.

TO LOOSEN HEADLIGHT RIMS

When One Has Become Rusted It Can Be Removed Easily by Use of Strap or Belt.

A headlight rim which has become rusted can easily be removed by the use of a strap or belt. Place the belt around the rim and pass the end through the buckle. When the belt is drawn tight, a sudden pull will loosen the rim without injuring the lens.

DANGER LURKS IN LEAVES

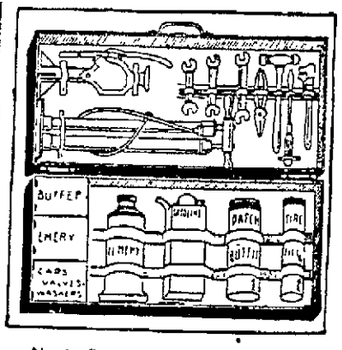

"Nothing is worse than leaves to make a car skid," remarked a Torch Lake, Mich., suburbanite. "For a quarter of a mile to day I drove over a bed of leaves and it was with difficulty that I kept the machine from going into the ditch. Passing another car at any speed is a dangerous practice if the road is covered with leaves."

TROUBLE KIT FILLS NEEDS OF MOTORIST

One Illustrated Opens Up Much Like a Medicine Case.

Everything Is Found in Its Place in Either Side Compartment—Fits Neatly Beneath Front Seat—Takes Little Room.

Every motorist, whether he carries a trouble kit or not, needs one I made mine of hardwood and painted it a durable black enamel. It has brass carrying handle, hinges and clasp. It is about 10 inches wide and 18 inches long, opens like a medicine case and lies flat upon the ground or running-board while making repairs. Everything is found in its place in either side compartment of the case, or the center division, which lies either side open when in use.

The case just fits neatly beneath the front seat, and takes up no more room than a promiscuous mess of tools and tire repairs scattered all about as in most cars.

Patching rolls, tire doughs and pastes, knife and scissors, tire tools, pliers, small wrenches, buffers, gasoline can, and every necessity is found in its own compartment in this case, and easily placed back after using, thus no tools or equipment lost.—George W. Brown, Ohio, in Farm and Home.

BULL PSYCHOLOGY.

"Red Rag" Theory Contradicted by Scientists.

The New York Herald says:

These scientists have no mercy upon the traditions. Here we have Professor Stratton of the University of California telling the psychologists' convention at Cambridge that red means nothing to a bull In fact, in the professor's experiments, the bull paid more attention to white objects than to red ones and green enraged him as quickly as carmine. It is the strangeness of the person or the suddenness of movements, really, that arouses the bull's interest

According to this revelation the matador may as well carry a white flag into the arena to draw the bull's charge. And what becomes of that favorite scene in fiction where the heroine starts across the field carrying a red parasol and is saved by the hero from the charge of a ferocious bull? "Like a red rag to a bull" is a simile which science now puts in the discard. Next we shall hear that bulls in china shops are particularly docile.

RUSH OF AUTO PLATE SEEKERS

The same old story about waiting until the last minute was evidenced today by the crowds that gathered at the Ulster county clerk's office filling out applications for the 1923 motor vehicle licenses. At times there were fifty men awaiting their turn to secure their license plates and cards. As the cards are issued by the county clerk this year, instead of having them sent from Albany as in previous years, the applicants had to wait until the young lady made them out on the typewriter. Thousands of dollars have been taken in during the past two weeks by County Clerk Saxe, for the license plates and tax on pleasure, commercial cars and omnibuses. On and after January 1, 1923, anyone runing a motor vehicle without having the new plates attached is liable to arrest and to pay a penalty.

Strands of green were festooned back of the pulpit, relieved here and there by a silver star—the tinseled Christmas tree in front The body of the church with strands of alternating red and green fastened with two toned bells made a very pretty combination, while on either side the windows had a large green wreath with a red bow. The committees wish to thank all who helped in any way with the entertainment, music and decorating The decorating committee wishes to express its appreciation to L Clark, who assisted by taking charge of the body of the church and trimmed it so effectively. ALLISTER AGAIN LOSES HIS MARY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Dec. 30.—Allister McCormick, young Chicago millionaire, who holds the world's record for "being left waiting at the church," and his temperamental fiance, Miss Mary Landon Baker, also of Chicago, have parted after a spectacular, international romance of three years, according to a report in the American colony today.

During the long and ardent courtship which extended from California to New York, thence to Paris, Italy and London, the wedding date had been set ten different times. On three occasions the church was set and the guests present but the bride failed to appear. Various excuses were given, the chief one being that the bride to be was indisposed.

Miss Baker and Mr McCormick spent Christmas in London, but now they have separated. Miss Baker has gone to the country to visit friends while Mr. McCormick is on his way to the south of France to recuperate from illness.

Friends of the couple said that no plans for a future wedding have been announced. When the young couple came to London it was said they would be married at the home of Mr. McCormick's relatives at Weybridge.
